stateboards.ie operates under the auspices of the Public Appointments Service and is committed to a policy of equal opportunity.

The Public Appointments Service (PAS), established under statute in 2004, provides an independent shared service in recruitment, assessment and selection to organisations across the Civil and Public Services. Under the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission Act, 2014, (“the 2014 Act”), the PAS is given responsibility for operating an open, accessible, rigorous and transparent system to support the Government in making appointments to the Commission. Our dedicated website, www.stateboards.ie, is the channel through which the PAS advertises vacancies on State Boards/Commissions. It is also the means through which accomplished, experienced and qualified people, including people who might not previously have been identified as available for appointment, can then apply to be considered for particular vacancies.

Membership the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission

Members of State Boards generally, (and this applies also to membership of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission), are appointed to act on behalf of the citizen to oversee the running of the affairs of state bodies. State bodies must serve the interests of the taxpayer, pursue value for money in their endeavours (including managing risk appropriately), and act transparently as public entities. Members of State Boards/Commissions, and the relevant management team, are accountable for the proper management of the organisation.

High standards of corporate governance in all State Agencies, whether in the commercial or non-commercial sphere, are critical to ensuring a positive contribution to the State's overall social and economic development.

Commission members should act on a fully informed basis, in good faith, with due diligence and care, and in the best interest of the State body. In that regard and in accordance with 13.2 of the Guidelines on Appointments to State Boards, "it is advisable that no member of a State Board should serve more than two full terms of appointment or should hold appointments to more than two State Boards." There are statutory requirements set out in the 2014 Act in relation to this matter – see section 5 of this booklet – Terms of Appointment – for further detail.

The process of appointment as a member of the Irish Human Rights and Equality Commission is set out in Section 13 of the 2014 Act. Members are appointed by the President on the advice of the Government and following the passing of a resolution of each House of the Oireachtas recommending the appointment. The Public Appointments Service (PAS) undertakes a selection process in order to make recommendations to the Government in respect of those persons to be appointed as members of the Commission. The Government is obliged to accept the PAS's recommendations, unless it has substantial and stated grounds not to do so. This is a key point of difference with the standard state boards selection process.

The Code of Practice for the Governance of State Bodies 2016 (the Code) is also relevant and provides a framework for the application of best practice in corporate governance by both commercial and non-commercial State bodies.

In order to be an effective contributor on a State Board/Commission it is recommended that members should:

- bring independent and objective scrutiny to the oversight of the organisation;
- be prepared to be challenging when necessary while being supportive to the delivery of organisational strategy and objectives;
- be equipped to offer considered advice on the basis of sound judgement and experience;
- be prepared to make a time commitment to their work commensurate with their role.
